

A Paddle in Plato's Pond (1)

The Mediterranean Sea occupies a unique geographical and cultural place in world history. It has nurtured the growth of great civilisations, encouraged the interchange of goods and ideas and spawned mighty conflicts on water and on land. Covering almost three millennia of human history, our ongoing journey will take us to islands large and small, to coastal regions and settlements, and to significant inland sites. The first paddle begins in the Aegean Islands before visiting Crete, Rhodes and the south western Turkish coast.
